

Quarterly Progress Report

Q2 2016

10.1.2015-12.31.2015

Dear Friends,

The end of 2015 marked the completion of another successful year for Hope Through Health and our partner organization, AED-Lidaw. In 2015, our organization intensified our focus on quality, completing a series of targeted quality improvement activities, and worked to improve access to quality healthcare services for all individuals. Thanks to your support, we were able to expand our services beyond HIV/AIDS care this year, through the launch of our Maternal and Child Health Program. The initial results from this program, described on pages 4, 5, and 6 of this report continue to be very encouraging.

Here are some highlights from the second quarter of fiscal year 2016:

- Hope Through Health received five grants, including two renewals of funding from the Browning Kimball Foundation and the Weyerhaeuser Family Foundation. We began new partnerships with Child Relief International, Positive Action Children's Fund, and Vitol Foundation. We are deeply grateful for the support of these and all of our partners for our work in Togo!
- In its first five months, the Maternal and Child Health Program has surpassed all targets. Through this program, high quality healthcare services have reached 94.7% of children under five and 71% of pregnant women in the communities served. See page 4 for more exciting results from the Maternal and Child Health Program.

We would not have been able to expand our impact and achieve these results without your unwavering support. We are deeply grateful for your partnership, which has allowed us to move ever closer to our vision of high quality healthcare for all in the underserved nation of Togo.

As with all of our efforts, we welcome your feedback. Please feel free to reach out to me or any member of our team with your questions or suggestions. We would love to hear from you!

With gratitude,

A DAY IN THE LIFE: MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH PROGRAM COMMUNITY HEALTH WORKER

Reine carries her son, Marveil on her back on her way to a home visit.

In the morning, Reine wakes up early to prepare breakfast for her family before leaving the house with her youngest son, Marveil, on her back. Yesterday she was performing door-to-door active case finding in one of the furthest villages in her work zone when she found a child with pneumonia. She treated the child with amoxicillin, and now must return for a follow up visit.

She greets acquaintances as she walks through fields of corn, yams, and peanuts. Since she carries her son on her back, she transports her work supplies on her head.

When she reaches the house of the sick child she sees that the little girl already looks significantly better than the day before. Reine discusses with the mother and verifies that she properly administered the medicine yesterday and this morning. She advises the mother to contact Reine right away if the child becomes more ill or if the mother notices certain danger signs.

An HTH Community Health Worker cares for a child in her home.

After her successful follow up visit, Reine stops by the house of a pregnant woman that she identified a few weeks ago. The woman was scheduled for her first prenatal consultation last week and Reine wants to make sure that she attended.

Reine checks the woman's health booklet to read any updates the midwife may have written. She discusses a birth plan with the woman, helping her identify when she will travel to the health center to deliver, who will accompany her, and what she will bring along.

Reine discusses prenatal care with a woman in her home.

An HTH Community Health Worker bikes home for lunch after a morning of work.

On her way home for lunch, Reine is stopped by a father who hurriedly shows her the way to his house. His son has had a high fever for three days and the father is worried. Reine consults the child and using a rapid test, determines that he has malaria. She treats the child for malaria and makes a note in her book to return to his house tomorrow for a follow up visit.

Finally, Reine returns home to care for her own children and get a little rest before her neighbors come knocking on her door again in the afternoon.
